

Association Management Companies

An association management company (AMC) provides management and specialized administrative services to professional and trade associations and other nonprofit organizations of varying sizes (from 10 members to 10,000 members) and annual budgets (from $25,000 to $16 million). The AMC model affords association clients the characteristics of economies of scale, experience in the association marketplace, flexibility and adaptability, buying power and centralized facilities. AMCs typically provide executive management, membership development, financial management, marketing and public relations, educational and professional development, meeting and event planning, strategic planning and lobbying among other services.

The following AMCs are members of CSAE. Their combined client base is approximately 50 associations.
